PATRICIA LAW HATCHER, CG, FASG*, is a genealogical lecturer, teacher, writer, and volunteer; a professional genealogist; and a trustee of the Association of Professional Genealogists. She has done genealogical research since 1982. A native of Omaha, Nebraska, currently residing in Dallas, Texas, her constantly migrating ancestors lived in Denmark, England, Scotland, Ireland, all of the original colonies prior to 1800, and 17 other states—presenting her with highly varied research problems.

Her special research interests include problem lineages, colonial New England, colonial Virginia, early Kentucky, Salem witchcraft, cemeteries and tombstones, naming patterns, and land platting. She enjoys her contacts with other genealogists, is heartened by their willingness and eagerness to learn, and believes as her stationery says, "When you search for ancestors, you find friends."
