Notes for MAURICE ELDON ROBISON:

From his death record, Eldon died of pneumonia, with septicemia. (infection). His doctor was William F. Blaisdell.

Eldon was Sunday School Superintendant at the Hayden Methodist Church for 25 years. He also was a former president of the Hayden Cemetery Association. He acted as Trustee for Spencer Township, Jennings County, Indiana, between 1952 and 1955.

Eldon farmed and got a job loading railroad cars at Buhner's Fertilizer Plant, on the East side of Seymour. He later went to work for Arvin Industries in Seymour, makers of automobile mufflers and exhaust pipes. He became an inspector, and at different times, worked on both the muffler and pipe lines. He retired from Arvins in 1974.

He raised cattle and hogs most of the time, but there were times when he also had ponies, goats, ducks, turkeys, rabbits, chickens and pigeons. Of course, it goes without saying, that there were always dogs and cats around. People always dump them in the country and they go to a farm and take up residence, where they will be fed from time to time.

He used to raise fox hounds and go fox hunting. I remember a few nights when he would load all of the family in the car and drive to a lane on Fred Voelkson's place. (which is now part of the Muscatatuck National Wildlife Refuge) We would get out of the car and Daddy would listen to the hounds barking as they trailed the foxes. Daddy would tell us what was going on; "It sounds like they're on a cold trail", or "They must have treed the fox", or "It sounds like they're on a really hot trail and Old Yeller is in the lead". (Old Yeller was a homely looking dog of white, with yellow markings and just a few black flecks. He looked like a white dog that somebody had thrown up on, so we kids always called him Old Puke) We kids didn't find nearly as much enjoyment in listening to the dogs as Daddy did, so we usually wound up catching lightning bugs until Daddy decided to go home.

He used to like to raise pigeons. He had about 600 at one time. It was kind of neat to see that many pigeons circling our farm. Some were almost as big as our Banty chickens, and some were very small and had feathers sticking out around their feet. The smaller ones were tumblers. For some reason that is unknown to me, those little pigeons would be flying along just fine, then turn a single or double summersault in mid air. Daddy was always building more pigeon nests and switching eggs from one nest to another, in hopes that the adoptive parents would be better able to raise the little pigeon to adulthood. Many times, he would take the two eggs from a pair of wild pigeons and replace it with one egg from his giant sized pigeons, figuring that it would take both of them to feed the giant sized baby.
